It is understood that he is to appear before the court at any time should it desire to pass further sentence.

Trains Got Twisted.

There was quite a mixup in the early trains this morning. Owing to the engine on the first breaking down, they both arrived at the depot here at about the same time. As the latter is a fast train, it was necessary for the former to give way and allow it to pass. After a little explanation everyone seemed to realize that Union depot had not moved to Monessen and quiet was again restored.

To Cure Red Noses.

WEBSTER NOTES.

Dr. J. P. Frye is in Belle Vernon today on business.

Abe Blick was a Pittsburg visitor yesterday, where he was transacting business.

R. L. McMahan will remove to the flat above the Bank, using the living rooms above the store for ware rooms, as it is his intention to add a new line of wall paper to his present stock.

Large crowds of young people are now seen each evening coasting down the hill back of town and as this is a particularly dangerous spot, it being necessary to cross the railroad tracks, extra precaution should be taken to lessen the possibility of a serious accident.

Thomas Dewalt, one of Webster's oldest and most respected citizens, died at his home here about 6 o'clock this morning of heart failure. Mr. Dewalt, who was 82 years of age, came to Webster from Punxsutawney about 40 years ago and has resided here ever since. His wide acquaintance and genial disposition to all, combined to make him one of our most well liked and honored citizens. He will be sadly missed by his host of friends. He leaves to mourn him an aged wife, who was constantly at his bedside during his last illness, two daughters, Mrs. J. W. Fell and Mrs James Rue residing at Webster and Newell, also two sons, John, of Monongahela and James of Height, Pa. Arrangements for the funeral have not yet been completed.

AT THE THEATRE.

It is easy enough to give the public a play that will "suit" if you have the receipt. The receipt is three parts genius and one part good luck. Simple as a politician's conscience. You can't fail. This receipt should be invaluable to young managers, for it was by following it absolutely that "The Two Johns" was made to hold the mirror up to American life so effectively. Pretty nearly every one admits that "The Two Johns" is a very entertaining comedy. A great many people are very enthusiastic about it and assert that it is the best thing of the kind that has been acted for a long time. However that may be, it has certainly caught the public fancy. J. C. Stewart wrote it, Al Rice and Ned Curtis do most of the acting—there you have the three parts genius. The luck did not belong to anybody. It was just a loose lot of luck that had been dodging around, eluding the grasp of several managers who really needed luck in their business, until finally Chas. G. Allen got a hold on it and he wasted no time in putting his brand on it.

Demonstrating Pure Food Products.

Arrangements have been made by Roger Bros. of 433 Schoonmaker avenue, with H. J. All are cordially invited to attend and learn the superior merits of the Pure Food Products as prepared by H. J. Heinz & Co.

Precautionary.

On my way to the village the other evening, I met a married friend running homeward at top speed with a curious looking parcel which he carried very gingerly.

"Halloa, Jim!" I said, "why this hurry?" He did not stop, but shouted as he ran, "New hat for the wife, Will. Running home before it's out of fashion."

Crushed to Death.

Vinenvo Glodenelite, an Italian, aged 22 years, of Donora, met death in a peculiar manner Sunday afternoon last while at work at the blast furnace. He was unloading a car of ore when the trap in the bottom of the car suddenly opened, permitting the contents of the car to escape. The Italian was working under the car, which was on an elevated track, and was caught and instantly crushed to death. His body was removed to the Rabe undertaking establishment and prepared for burial. The remains were later taken to the home of the deceased on Castner avenue.

Trout Likely To Be Plentiful'

Followers of Izaak Walton, who have been observing conditions in the region of nearby mountain streams, declare that trout will be more plentiful the coming season than they have been for several years. The open winter has favored the fish, although unless the freezes are unusually severe the trout do not suffer in cold weather. During the open season of the last two years the water has been so high and so muddy that catches of fishermen were not very large, so that there is considerable of a surplus that will await the anglers when the trout season opens in Pennsylvania April 15.

Cancer Claims Victim.

Mrs. Jesse Jones who was operated on about a month ago for cancer, died last night at her home on Sixth street hill. It was thought at the time of the operation, which was considered successful, that she would recover, but she became worse about a week ago, resulting in death. Deceased leaves a husband and several small children.

THE IRON HAND

[Original.]

The circle of the Iron Hand was composed of a few rascals who induced persons to join them supposing them to be nihilists, then blackmailing their victims under threats of exposure. The biggest villain of the lot was Petrovich Vronsky, who was also a member of the secret police. Finding it to his interest to ruin young Ivan Tornovich, he induced him to join the circle, sent him out loaded with revolutionary documents and had him arrested.

Not long after this Vronsky was sitting in his office one morning when a young girl entered and asked if she might have a private interview with him. Vronsky gladly listened to her, and she informed him that under a certain viaduct over which ran the railroad from St Petersburg to Moscow a party of nihilists had stored explosives, which were to be fired when the czar made his next passage over the road.

Vronsky, much pleased at the prospect of saving the life of the czar and the preferment sure to follow, eagerly listened to all the girl had to say. When she had finished he said to her:

"But you have not told me where the viaduct is located."

"I will show you."

"Very well. Come on."

"But do you not care to trap the conspirators?"

"Certainly."

"Then wait till the czar is about to pass the place."

Vronsky made every effort to get all the necessary information from the girl so that he could proceed without her, but she was immovable, and he was obliged to be content. A few weeks later he sent her word that the czar would go to Moscow the next day and directed her to come to his office. The girl—Fedia Pavlovna she called herself—appeared promptly, but when Vronsky proposed to take a party of the police with him she refused to do her part unless he would go alone, giving as a reason that he would find no one but a boy of fifteen who was to ignite the explosive. Vronsky, pleased with the idea of gaining all the credit for himself, consented.

Fedia led him to the outskirts of the city, where, tied to a post, was a horse harnessed to a tarantass. Directing Vronsky to get into the tarantass, she unhitched the horse and drove into the country. She soon complained that the rays of the sun on the white snow hurt her eyes, and when Vronsky told her that she should have a hat with a brim to shade them she told him that if he were gallant he would lend her his own hat. As he did not respond she playfully tried to take it off his head and put it on her own. This led to a scramble, during which Fedia got possession of the hat and dropped it in the road. Passing the reins to Vronsky, she ran back for it, and while his back was turned she slipped a paper into the lining.

"Come," said Vronsky, "we must stop this fooling. The czar's train is due in thirty minutes. How far have we to go?"

"Only a short distance."

But Vronsky began to be worried. Suppose he should not reach the place in time. He had permitted the czar to incur this risk that he might gain a larger reward. He should have prevented his majesty from going. But in that case there would be no great service, as the czar was warned constantly and Vronsky would not trap the conspirators. What Vronsky wished to do was to flag the train, and when his majesty had alighted he would show him the preparations laid for his destruction. He even had a red silk handkerchief in his pocket for the purpose.

"Drive faster," said Vronsky.

"Why so? Do you wish to spoil all by arriving before the boy who is to fire the dynamite?"

"We can take him as he comes up."

"Leave it to me," said Fedia. "Am I not interested in our success? Have I not planned it all?"

"Yes. You are a very bright girl."

Fedia kept asking the time and arranged their arrival so that when they drove up to the viaduct they heard the train coming.

"Jump out quick," she said, "and seize the boy. I will flag the train."

"Here, take this handkerchief."

Vronsky ran under the viaduct, and Fedia climbed up out to the track and waved. The train came to a stop, and the minister of police, who accompanied the czar, alighted in great excitement.

"What is the matter?"

"There is a man under the viaduct intending to blow up his majesty."

Guards were sent below, but they found no one except Vronsky, who was climbing the embankment.

"That's the man," said Fedia.

"You little villain! What do you mean? Gentlemen, I am Petrovich Vronsky of the police."

"And a member of the circle of the Iron Hand," said Fedia.

"Search him," said the minister.

Vronsky was searched, and in the lining of his hat was found a certificate of his membership of the Iron Hand. The viaduct was examined and twenty pounds of dynamite found concealed under one of the girders.

"Bring the girl before me," said the czar.

"Little girl," he said, "how can I reward you for saving my life?"

"By releasing my brother, Ivan Tornovich, who has been sacrificed by the circle of the Iron Hand."

This was not all that Ivan's sister gained by her exploit. She was taken into service in the Winter palace, and her brother was eventually given a commission in the army, where he served the czar faithfully. Vronsky spent the rest of his life in Siberia.

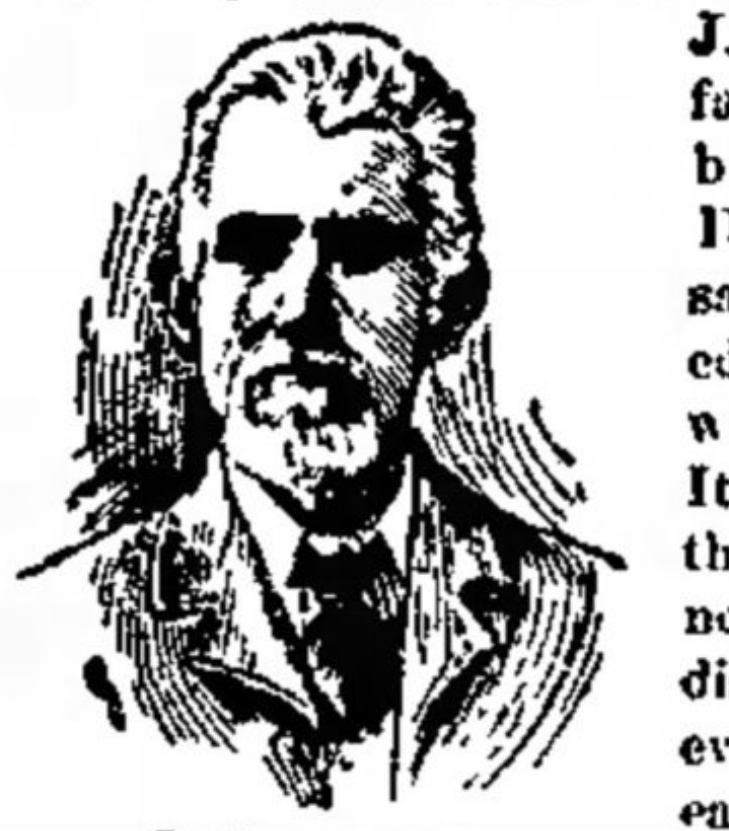
Couldn't Lift Ten Pounds.

Doan's Kidney Pills Brought Strength and Health to the Sufferer, Making Him Feel Twenty-Five Years Younger.

Sick kidneys cause a weak, lame or aching back, and a weak back makes a weak man. Can't be well and strong until the kidneys are cured. Treat them with Doan's Kidney Pills. Here's the testimony of one man cured.



J. B. CORTON.

J. B. Corton, farmer and lumberman, of Deppe, N. C., says "I suffered for years with my back. It was so bad that I could not walk any distance nor even ride in easy buggy. I do not believe I could have raised ten pounds of weight from the ground, the pain was so severe. This was my condition when I began using Doan's Kidney Pills. They quickly relieved me and now I am never troubled as I was. My back is strong and I can walk or ride a long distance and feel just as strong as I did twenty-five years ago. I think so much of Doan's Kidney Pills that I have given a supply of the remedy to some of my neighbors and they have also found good results. If you can sift anything from this rambling note that will be of any service to you, or to any one suffering from kidney trouble, you are at liberty to do so."

A FREE TRIAL of this great kidney medicine which cured Mr. Corton will be mailed on application to any part of the United States. Address Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y. Sold by all dealers; price, fifty cents per box.
